TEAM TALK

In this edition, we sat down with Eng. Abd Al Rahman Labib, our Joinery & Site Manager, to get a glimpse into his work, interests, and what keeps him motivated on and off the site. Here's what he had to share.

Joinery & Site Manager

What's been the most challenging project you've worked on at SKETCHURE so far?

The WFP project. It had a tight timeline, frequent variation orders, and involved coordinating with an international organization, adding significant complexity.

What's one item you always have with you on site?

I always carry a measuring tape, as it's essential for checking dimensions, layouts, and ensuring installations meet specs.

If you weren't an engineer, what would you be doing?

I enjoy food and love cooking, so I'd probably be a head chef, as it combines creativity and discipline in a different yet rewarding way.

What's one personal habit that helps you stay productive?

I'm always interested in learning something new, which helps keep me active and engaged.

Do you have any hobbies outside of work?

I enjoy reading and traveling, as they help me relax and expose me to new cultures and perspectives.
